the allver question to an amendment of the Senaterules, to permit cloture.

The managers of the anti-silver campaign in the House assume that the Sensite will pass the Voorhees bill as a substitute of the Wilson bill which passed the House. When the Voorhees bill comes over from the Senate it will naturally be referred to the committee on coinage, but this committee is bitterly hostile to repeal, so it will not be sent there if it can be avoided. The gold standard men think they have found means to evade this. Under the new rules the bill, when received, as it does not require consideration in the committee of the whole, involving no appropriation, it is expected a motion will be made to concur in the Senate amendment

The company was organized under the laws of the State of Colorado, June 10, 1889, for the purpose of building a cannithrough the Republic of Nicaragua, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The authorized capital stock was $12,-000,000, all of which is paid up. After the organization it became associated with the Maritime Canal company with the same object. The late scandals in France over the building of the Panama canal seriously affected the American company and in certain nature of the work projected had the effect of making capitalists cautious about investing in the concern. jected had the effect of making capitalists cautious about investing in the concern. The present monetary stringency further embarassed the concern until finally the officers became unable to meet the demands and decided to apply to the courts mands and decided to apply to the courts for a receiver.

President Warner Miller said the failure of the Nicaragua Canal Construction company was due to inability to sell securities of the company. The company was pressed for a settlement of its bilis payable and the receivership was the direct outcome of the claim of Reas & Co. for an unpaid bill of exchange amounting to $4.000.

These mines are located about seventy-five miles north of the city of Ouebec and are known as the Gilbert Juebec, and are known as the Gilbert iver gold mines. Mining Expert Dwight littlenden is making an examination of he mines in the Beanoe district, and has ilready made one report, in which he says e found a large number of gold bearing he found a large number of gold bearing quartz veins.

Any report made by Crittenden, who is a practical miner, is regarded by mining men, it is said, as beyond dispute, and the very fact that he is making an examination satisfies Wall street that the purchase by the Haggin syndicate is practically settled upon.

One group of mines in this district is owned by a number of Boston and Fortland merchants, but it is reported that arrangements have been made for the transler of this property to Haggin and his associates. The value of all of the mines is up in the millions.

Mining men here are much interested in the outcome of the deal, as the same syndicate is reported to have recently secured some of the richest mines in Chili in return for a cash advance made at the time of the Chilean war. None of the principals, who were seen today would discuss the matter at all.

of the treasury to inform the Senate how the revenues since the commencement of the present fiscal year compare with the estimates. At 12:35 p. m. the bill to repeal the Sherman act was haid before the Senate and Sherman proceeded to address the Senate.

He said if the repeal act was the only reason for the extra session it seemed to him insufficient. It was justified, however, by the existing financial stringency. Congress and the people agreed that both gold and silver would be continued as money. If cheap money is wanted, free coinage of silver would be the way to get it, but it must not be called bimetallism. It would be monometallism of silver. The president, said Sherman, failed to give the cause of the decline in silver. It was due to the fact that was d lecline in silver. It was due to the fact that we had to pay our debts-debts payable in gold. England had to make her loss in the Argentine Republic good, to prevent her own institutions from going down, so she retured our securities and demanded payment in gold. The bai-ance of trade was also against us and we had to make the difference good. This, not the Sherman law, led to the present condition.

Mr. Sherman said he consented to the Mr. Sherman said he consented to the passage of the law to prevent free coinage and to that extent it benefited the country; but a year ago he introduced a bill almost in the same words as the Voorhees bill to repeal it. N.t.a Democrat voted for it. They must answer why. The trouble was currency famine; not fear as to the soundness of the country's money. He did not believe repeal would overcome the stagnation, but it would ease the money market from dread of free coinage. He warned them that if the Democrats attempted to alter the existing tariff, they would plunge the country linto deeper distress.

As to the future we must preserve the ing tariff, they would plunge the country into deeper distress.

As to the future we must preserve the parity of all our money. The balance of trade might be against as next year, and it might be necessary to issue securities to secure gold to maintain the parity. The Scuretary of the Treasury ought to have authority to make the deficit good. All parties heretofore gave the secretary that authority. The sarpins in the treasury should be coined and used for all legal purposes. Ha did not believe in buying sliver from our people at a profit; if it was a profit, it was intrigue; if not profit, 'twas fraud. He believed it a fraud.

He denied Senator Voorhees' statement that the act of 1873 was a "healthy demonetization.'

cleared the bill of 1818, in which he de-clared "gold the universal standard of the world" and urged the gold dollar as fixing the standard by which workmen knew exactly what his labor was worth. It was not until sliver became a cheaper dollar than the old that any one demanded it, and then it was to take ad-vantage of creditors. The purchase of demanded it, and then it was to take advantage of creditors. The purchase of silver by the United States when all others stopped it, was the improvident use of public money. Instead of striking down silver he wanted to build it up, but it could not be done by the United States alone. He believed the best thing to do was to suspend the purchase of silver and devote attention to the needs of the hour. He would give power and authority to protect the credit of the government at home and abroad and after waiting to see what the indian policy was, and further efforts of international conference, the present clouds of gloom would disappear.

The reading of quotations about gold

The reading of quotations about gold showing such a remarkable change of opinion on the part of Senator Stewart, provoked general laughter at the expense of that senator, who looked somewhat bewildered, but only stroked his beard. Subsequently he promised to reply to Senator Sherman on Friday next.

Mr. Sherman followed up his advantage over the Nevada senator by exhibiting a newspaper published in that state, one whole side of which was occupied with notices of assessments on silver mining stock, all payable in United States gold coin.

Mr. Sherman concluded at 2:40 o'clock, having occupied two hours and ten minutes. Portions of his speech were read from manuscript, but the greater part of it was delivered extempore and with great rapidity and force. He was listened to throughout with unflagging attention and interest.

When he concluded, the repealing bill on which he had spoken, was laid aside and the national bank circulation bill was taken up to allow Mr. Teller to finish the speech which he begun yesterday.

Mr. Voorbees gave notice, however, that after the morning business tomorrow he would ask the Senate to take up the repeal bill and would do so from day Mr. Teller then proceeded with his speech. He said: It was the prorogative of the United States to issue its own currency and this was a good time to reform its banking system. He would not, by his vote, putany more power into the hands of the banks of the country. He would not enable them any longer to paralyze the business of the country as they are doing today. He had a fair opportunity to wipe them out and he would wipe them out as quickly as he could. He was opposed to the present system and he desired to withdraw from the banks the privileges they now possessed.

[Prolonged cheers followed from Irish and ministerial benches.]
Leonard Courtney, Unionist, then moved the rejection of the bill. He spoke briefly.

John Redmond, leader of the Parnel-lites, who followed Courtney, defined his attitude towards the bill. The bill was defective in some respects and disappointing in others. Nobody in his senses could regard the bill as final and a satisfactory settlement of the great question at issue,

A FOND MOTHER Who Thought Her Baby Carriage Would

A lady of 250 pounds avordupois, tanding at the corner of Stanley and East Main streets, yesterday became very angry became the conductor of a closed street car wouldn't carry her with a baby, a big grip and a baby carriage to her point of destination for 5 cents. She first stopped the car and directed the conductor to put the grip on the front and the carriage on the rear end.

"But how are the passengers to get on and off!" inquired the conductor.

"Well, when say one wants to get on you can lift the carriage off." graciously answered the fat woman.

The conductor said he would like to accommodate her, but that the rules of the company forbid the carrying of baby carriages on the cars. Then the woman got angry and as the car rolled along the conductor and passengers heard her say something about the street car company going to Hades or some other scaport town.—Hartford Times.
